

The Cure for the Common Design

DYNAMIC SYMMETRY

MARK ROSENHAUS, CKD

MARCH 27, 2008 5:30-8:00 P.M.

THE CURE FOR THE COMMON DESIGN

What do a pineapple, space shuttle and your finger have in common? They are all designed using identical proportions.

In this fascinating, "Why didn't I learn this before?" session, secrets will be revealed to energize your intuition and to design beauty that sells.

This program will focus on how the Golden Rectangle, Fibonacci numbers, and geometry in nature and your own body influence art and design. Da Vinci, Michelangelo, Frank Lloyd Wright, the Taj Mahal, Notre Dame, even the Empire State building will illustrate perfect compositions.

The goal of this program is to provide an alternative to the cliches of mirror symmetry by using balance, as on a see-saw, to create vitality and movement.

Visualize the whole space to find the direction and flow of the room which you direct towards the focal point.
